Governors' Corner

It has been all about the learning this week - The Governors, like the children, are always learning and looking to improve. On Wednesday afternoon we were in school to learn all about Maths – how it is taught, how it is monitored, and how it is improved and tailored for children. It has certainly changed a lot since I was at school. It is such an important skill throughout school and life, it was fantastic to see the children so engaged in learning. There are many different ways of teaching each element so that it should work in some way for everyone which was a very refreshing difference to my school days where it was this way or nothing. The walls, corridors and classroom are all alive with Maths so it just becomes part of everyday life which is fantastic.

Then yesterday, I was very privileged to be invited to a Governor Day at Repton Manor Primary in Ashford to see how they do things. Being a governor is a voluntary position and it can be a lot of work. It is important to get the balance right between governors desire to do as much as they can for the school, and doing enough – and enough of the right things – to be effective in our roles. An exchange visit can offer up new ways of thinking which can be really helpful to how we work, and yesterday was a really good thought-provoking day with lots of ideas and lots to talk about at our next meetings.

We wish you all a lovely weekend.
